LOCAL MERCHANTS TO AID BALL TEAM

There was an unusually large and enthusiastic meeting at the regular monthly session of the Daly City Merchants' Association last Wednesday night. President Andrew Vireno presided.

Manager Cavagnaro of the Daly City Merchants' baseball team was present and expressed the wish to have the team join the league this fall, and the Merchants' Association donted $50 toward the expenses.

Complaint was made about the unsanitary condition of the sewer vent in front of the premises at 6084 Mission street and the president appointed a committee to investigate. It was claimed that the vent was placed in the middle of the sidewalk and in close proximity to the office window of the place of business at that address.

Complaint was also made about the late delivery of mail and some of the merchants claim they did not get their mail until the afternoon or even later. The secretary was instructed to communicate with the Postoffice Department in this regard.

Many other matters of importance came before the meeting and after they had been disposed of the members retired to a near-by restaurant for refreshments, and to enjoy the music and speaking. It was unanimously agreed that it was one of the best meeting ever held by the Merchants' Association.

Among the speakers of the evening were A. J. Bodien, Julius Twesten, A. Vireno, J. J. Fahey, Peter Pavlos, M. Rutter, and others.

It is remarkable to note the general good will and absolute harmony among the members at these meetings, and everyone seems determined to stand together for the good of all concerned, and the things already accomplished are evidenc of the power and importance that an organization of this character has. Other towns in this county seem to be following the lead of the Daly City Merchants' Association and are organizing for their protection and advancement.

All merchants, business and professional men in Daly City are cordially invited to attend the meetings and to join the association.

The next regular meeting will be held on the first Wednesday night in October, at the City Hall, at 8:30 in the evening.

W. H. CLAY,
Recording Secretary.

BOYS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH

Tom Evans, of Winchester street, and his cousin, Owen Felsch, started out over the Labor day holidays to enjoy themeslves in the wide open spaces of Big Basin and Santa Cruz.

Sunday night, in the dusk of the evening, while riding on the Santa Cruz mountains, they hit some loose gravel and their car went over the embankment. Tom Evans was thrown clear and received a few scratches. Owen, however, went down with the machine until a tree stopped its flight. Help arrived shortly afterward and Owen was taken to the Santa Cruz hospital, where upon examination it was found that he had received a broken left shoulder.

That either of the boys escaped death seems miraculous.

Owen Felsch is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Felsch, of Hanover street, formerly of Pocatello, Idaho. At present Owen is confined to his bed and his mother, a capable nurse, is taking care of him, assisted by Dr. Joseph Buttler.

FORMER DALY CITY MAN WINS A CHARMING BRIDE

The marriage of Miss Josephine Balanzino and Mr. H. W. Tesene, formerly of Westlake avenue, took place in St. Peter's and Paul's church on August 23, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives.

Miss Laura Balanzino was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Maxine Squarsino and Miss Marie Brugnone. Mr. Lamar Johnson and Mr. Peter Musio were the ushers.

The bride's gown was of ivory satin, trimmed with Italian lace, and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Following the wedding there was a reception at the Hotel Whitcomb. The young couple left for Southern California on their honeymoon. Upon their return they will make their home in San Francisco.

Mr. Tesene's father and brother came from Cedar Lake, Iowa, to attend the wedding, and started on their homeward journey last Thursday.

TANFORAN OPENS ON NOVEMBER 15

Tanforan race track will open its gates Saturday, November 15, for a period of twenty-five days of high class racing. There will be no racing on Sundays, bringing the wind-up on Saturday, December 13.

Four stakes topped by the San Farncisco Handicap, with a value of not less than $10,000 added, and three others of not less than $5,000 each, will be offered, with $2,500 handicaps on the opening day and on Thanksgiving day. The minimum purse at the meet will be not less than $800.

Announcement of the session of sport at Tanforan was made by Dr. Charles E. St. Claire Jones, secretary of the Pacific Coast Breeders' Association, which owns the plant at San Bruno.

Dr. Jones stated that Joseph A. Murphy, who has been here for the past week conferring with the officers of the association, had agreed to personally conduct the meeting, as he did that of last spring.

The four stakes are as follows:

The San Francisco Handicap, for two year olds and upwards, not less than $10,000 added, one mile and a sixteenth.

The San Mateo Handicap, for two year olds and upward, not less than $5,000 added, one mile and an eighth.

The Pacific Coast Breeders' Association Stakes, for two year olds, bred in California or Nevada, the property of members of the Pacific Coast Breeders' Association at the time of closing, not less than $5,000 added, six furlongs.

The San Bruno Handicap, for two year olds and upward, not less than $5,000 added, six furlongs.

The stakes will close about the middle of October.

As to the meeting, Judge Murphy said:

"The fame of Tanforan's success last spring spread all over the United States and Canada. I have been constantly importuned by breeders and horsemen to secure from the Breeders' Association an outline of its plans for the fall meeting. My answer has been that I wanted to be sure that we had convinced the people of California that racing could be conducted as a clean, high class sport. Dr. Jones and his associates have assured me that sentiment in the San Francisco Bay area is overwhelmingly with us, so we are ready to move on.

"Everyone knows I am unalterably opposed to long race meetings. At the same time it is a long and expensive shipment from the East to California, and we must race for a sufficient period to warrant such shipments. Twenty-five days would seem to be a happy medium. That will be the limit we shall race at any time. Then, too, by racing to December 13, our racing colony will do its Christmas shopping here, which will be a stimulus to trade in this area.

"Practically the same officials will be in charge as last spring. A Bahr stall starting gate will be shipped from Chicago. It has made a wonderful impression on the fans wherever employed."

HEARING SET FOR ANDERSON'S TRIAL

September 12 has been set as the date for a preliminary hearing for Antone Anderson, Crocket fisherman, who shot and killed Game Warden Allen Curry, of San Francisco, and Jack Burke, former game warden of this county, in a gun duel aboard his boat off the San Mateo coast of San Francisco bay. The fight took place about a mile from shore on April 30.

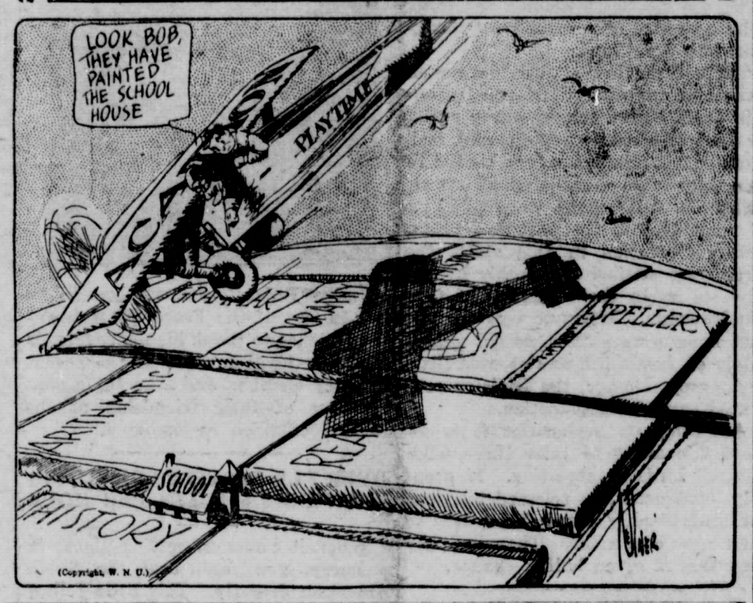
In the duel with the two men Anderson received wounds which confined to a San Francisco hospital for several months. He is now at liberty on $10,000 bond bail. He will be tried for killing the two men in this county. Anderson claims that he shot in self defence after the two men rowed out to his boat and began shooting at him.

SEEKS $10,000 AS RESULT OF AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Damages of over $10,000 for a scar on the face and permanent injuries in an automobile accident on the Skyline boulevard on July 5 are sought by Isabel Murphy in a suit filed in the Superior Court. The defendant in the suit is Joseph Rainey. The plaintiff claims that she was a passenger in the machine driven by Paul Sickenger when it was struck by the Rainey car half a mile from the San Francisco county line.

Workmen have begun construction of the new Burlingame library building, which will cost $43,360, and will occupy the site of the old library.

Coming Down to Earth



ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

Hearing of litigation between Joint Highway district No. 9 and the Ocean Shore Railway Company over certain rights-of-way needed for the construction of the tri-county highway from San Francisco through San Mateo county's coastside to Santa Cruz has been continued until September 8.

Miss Virginia Abrams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Abrams, of San Francisco, was injured Saturday when the car being driven by her father was sideswiped by another car and overturned on El Camino Real near Cypress Lawn cemetery.

Victor C. Kelly, 49, of Dumbarton Oaks, was instantly killed last Saturday when his automobile was struck by a train at the Roger street crossing in Redwood City. Kelley, who was on his way to work, had stopped to allow one train to pass and started across without noticing the approach of another from the opposite direction.

Dean Robert J. Hopkins of the San Mateo Junior College has served notice on the students that hazing has been classed as a misdemeanor by the State Board of Education, and that there will be no misdemeanors in Junior College.

Superior Judge George A. Buck has returned to the bench at Redwood City after an absence of two months because of illness. For several weeks Judge Buck was confined to the hospital, undergoing treatment for throat trouble.

Complaining of feeling ill, L. Liaskos, of Oakland, employed at the Southern Pacific yards in Visitacion Valley, was walking toward the company's first aid station when he suddenly toppled over dead.

Heavy traffic on San Mateo county roads over the week end resulted in a number of accidents and traffic jams. No fatalities were reported, although a number of persons were seriously injured. There were three arrests in connection with accidents.

George P. Marsh and Garret L. Colloty, former youthful employes of the Daly City branch of the Bank of Italy, and William J. Casey, Mission street theatre manager, asked probation from Federal Judge Harold Louderback last Monday. They had pleaded guilty to violation of the national bank act.

Bids will be opened during the month for the grading of 4.1 miles of the Bayshore highway from Redwood City to Willow road, and the concrete pavement of the Bayshore highway through South San Francisco.

Building activity in Redwood City during August was greater than during the same month in 1929, but did not approach the peak month of July, according to the city building inspector.

Lions Club members from all parts of California gathered at Sacramento on Wednesday to attend the seventy-sixth annual state fair and participate in the program arranged for the fifth day of the exposition.

Officer William Riley of the county traffic squad was painfully injured Monday night when his motorcycle crashed into the auto of Hohman Winfrey, Lomita Park, the officer suffering a broken arm, sprained ankle, and the loss of several teeth.

DEL MONTE RACE MEET IN OCTOBER

Plans of wealthy sportsmen of the state for amateur and steeplechase racing began to take definite form when the recently organized Monterey County Fair, co-operating with the newly incorporated Pacific Coast Steeplechase and Racing Association, made application to the Pacific Coast Breeders' Association for a sanction to conduct five days of racing at Del Monte in connection with the Monterey County Fair, opening October 8.

The racing on the flat will be under the jurisdiction and rules of the Pacific Coast Breeders' Association, while the steeplechase events will be under the control of the new hunts association. Floyd McKenney will act as steward for the Breeders' Association, and James W. Colt will serve in a similar capacity for the steeplechase organization. There will be five races on the flat each day.

Joseph A. Murphy, who is in San Francisco conferring with the officers of the Pacific Coast Breeders' Association, was at Del Monte Friday as the guest of S. F. B. Morse and Carl S. Stanley. He was enthusiastic over the proposed plans at Del Monte. Judge Murphy said:

"If the ideas as outlined to me are carried out the racing, steeplechasing, polo and hunt club program will make one of the most enticing sport propositions in the United States. Del Monte would be an ideal place for the development of hunters and steeplechase horses. It has climate and everything else that is needed and I am sure many Easterners of means would be induced to ship here for the winter months.

"The polo field, with its sandy soil, is one of the best I have ever seen. No amount of rain could spoil it. The country is also perfectly adapted for drag hunts, point to point steeplechases and other picturesque sports. I predict a great future for the proposition."

GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH PRAYER MEETINGS

The Presbyterian church of Daly City announces that prayer meetings will again be held on Wednesday evenings beginning September 3, 7:45 o'clock.

These meetings will be given over to Bible study and prayer and judging by past experience it is believed that they will be of service to all who come.

Sunday evening, the pastor will preach on the text, "Seek ye the Kingdom of God; and all these things will be added unto you." Service begins at 7:45. The church is located at Evergreen and Hanover.

The Sunday school will observe Rally Day in a few weeks and a program is being arranged which will give the children an opportunity to show what they can do.

CURFEW HOUR FOR THE TOY GOLF COURSES IN REDWOOD

Redwood City has gone on record as being the first peninsula municipality to enact a set of regulations and restrictions exclusively for the miniature golf courses. The city council has given approval to an ordinance drawn up by City Attorney Mansfield, setting hours at which the miniature courses must close, the license fee and other regulations. All miniature courses in Redwood City must close at midnight. The curfew hour for those near apartments was set at 10 o'clock. They can not open befor 7 o'clock in the morning. After 9 in the evening all children under 12 must be accompanied by their parents to the courses.

MERCHANTS' NINE WIN CLOSE GAME

By HAROLD MARTIN

For the first time in two months the Daly City nine had to come from behind to win. The Merchants defeated Visitacion Valley, 5 to 2, last Sunday, in a hard fought, up-hill battle, making it six straight victories.

Gene Keagle, local chucker, displayed brilliant pitching to beat the valley club. His courage and skill were outstanding in this nerve-wrecking contest. Gene faced the necessity of allowing only one run in seven innings, and he came through like a veteran. In order to keep his twirling record of six straight wins unmarred, Keagle limited the opposing batters to nine hits, five walks and struck out ten. More than half of the safeties were garnered after two outs.

There were other elements that helped decide the winner, to be sure. The hard hitting by Pat Sloan and a timely double off Assalino's bat had marked effect, but the splendid fielding of Al Toole glistened above all. Toole celebrated his return to the Merchants' line up by accepting seven chances without an error. His sparkling performance at third leaves no doubt that he should be ranked as the best utility infielder on any city team.

The hitting punch that has been in a dormant condition among local batters was very much in evidence last Sunday. Daly City collected eleven hits for a total of sixteen bases. Pat Sloan garnered two doubles and a triple in four trips to the plate, leading the assault. Plansky, Assalino and Rettig helped the Merchants' cause along with two bingles each.

Visitacion scored the first run of the contest in the third inning. F. Eberling obtained a double to start the ball rolling, and crossed the plate on another two base hit by Dunning. This lone marker appeared very large indeed, considering the way Daly City was running the bases.

The Merchants took the lead in the fourth frame, after two good chances to score were thrown away. Sloan obtained his first double of the day, Zellis walked, and they both scored on Assalino's hit to right field.

The last half of the fifth inning found Keagle in a tough spot, with three men on base and two away. Lister, a dangerous hitter, came to bat. Gene pitched three straight balls and then fed him three strikes. On the sixth delivery Lister grounded to Assalino at second for an easy out.

Daly City added one more run to their score in the sixth frame, and chalked up two exra markers the final time at bat, while Visitacion was making it miserable by scoring once in the eighth stanza.

During the eighth inning the play that really won the game was staged. There were men on third and second and no outs. F. Eberling socked a line drive at Keagle, the ball hit Gene in the leg and bounced toward third base. Toole captured the pellet and threw home to put out the runner.

The Merchants are booked to oppose the Mission Reds "A," Sunday on a city diamond. McIsaacs, manager of the Reds, has advised Cavagnaro to strengthen his team for this contest. The Mission's club can not be considered a set-up and should give Daly City a close battle.

The line-up for Sunday's game follows:

The estate of the late Viola K. Dunne, of Hillsborough, widow of a Hollister cattle baron, who died April 22, is valued at approximately $1,156,468, according to an appraisal filed in the Superior court.

COUNTY TAX RATE IS RAISED TO $3.31

San Mateo county's tax rate has been raised to $3.31 on every $100 of valuation, to meet expenses of the county for the ensuing year. This rate was fixed by the county board of supervisors, being 42 cents more than it was last year, when the rate was $2.98 for every $100.

The supervisors explained that the $155,000 addition to the Community hospital at Beresford, and the $58,000 expense for holding two elections this year made the increase necessary. The hospital addition called for an increase of 31 cents and 7 mills, while the election cost forced an increase of 12 cents and 4 mills. Had it not been for these two expenditures, the supervisors explained, the rate would have been decreased 2 cents and 1 mill from last year's rate.

The board decided to build the hospital addition by special tax instead of bond issue, because they maintained that by the time the bonds would have all been redeemed it would have cost the county much more. A special tax, they claimed, pays for the improvement in one year.

No provision was made in the budget for the special election that will probably be called by the governor early in the year to elect a successor to State Senator Roy Fellom, who will not represent San Mateo county after January 1. Fellom was elected San Francisco's senator, which leaves San Mateo county to elect one. This will probably cost another $25,000, it was estimated.

Another increase this year over last is the item marked in the budget as advertising, but which is really devoted to the support of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, the supervisors said. The board provided $16,895 for the county chamber this year, which represents an increase of nearly 1 cent for every $100.

On the other hand ,the county library fund was cut to $10,487, or a decrease of 7 mills for every $100. The salary fund went up this year, while the social service fund took a drop.

The general fund jumped from 11 cents and 2 mills for every $100 last year to 32 cents for every $100 this year. This was to take care of the $58,000 election costs.

Hospital construction soared from 8 cents and 2 mills for every $100 last year to 31 cents and 7 mills for every $100 this year. This takes care of the new $155,000 wing.

The expenditures figured from the chart arranged and adopted by the supervisors show that in the ensuing year the total will be $1,422,414, which represents only the amount to be raised by taxation.

DR. BARNEY ADDRESSES GENERAL PERSHING P. T. A.

The regular monthly business meeting of the General Pershing P. T. A., held Tuesday afternoon, was well attended by members and friends eager to hear the message of Dr. Barney, eminent child authority. One of the points on which she laid particular stress was giving tasks that the child can accomplish; in other words, lessons and duties that he is capable of comprehending, as continual failure is often the ruination of the child; for a backward child is one with a defective nervous system, which is often brought on by the lack of sleep, lack of discipline, or unsuitable diet.

Following Dr. Barney, Mrs. E. Hassett, school principal, spoke on co-operation between mother and teacher.

A social hour was then enjoyed by all, during which dainy refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Easten.

Mrs. Boyle, the president, wishes to invite all mothers who have children in the school to join the association for the mutual benefit of mother, child and school. L. F.

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE ARE UNITED IN MARRIAGE

Aloycious Brady, of Templeton avenue, and Miss Marie Ross were united in marriage on August 29, in St. Dominic's church, at 7 P. M., the pastor of the parish officiating at the ceremony. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sari, of Templeton avenue. The church was well filled with friends of the bridal couple. After the ceremony the bridal party and the guests met at the Silver Slipper Cafe, where a wedding supper was served at an artistically decorated table which had been reserved for the occasion.

The young couple are enjoying a honeymoon at Guerneyville, on the Russian river. Upon their return they will make their home in San Francisco. A wide cirlce of friends join in wishing them a happy journey through life together.

BLOIS TO SUPERVISE BANKS IN COUNTY

Actuated by the great success of its branch supervisorial plan in San Francisco, the Bank of Italy has expanded the plan to include a number of branches in San Mateo county and has conferred greater authority on the officer in charge, who hereafter shall be known as the district manager.

The general executive committee of the bank announced Tuesday that the first district manager for this enlarged jurisdiction has been named in the person of Marsden S. Blois, former manager of the Market-Geary branch, University of California graduate and attorney, who has performed conspicuously for the institution in Central California during the past decade. Blois has already assumed his new duties.

Under the new set-up, Blois will have fifty branches under his jurisdiction, and will have authority to make decisions on virtually all of the major problems with which those branches are concerned. His jurisdiction will extend to San Mateo, Redwood City, and Half Moon Bay.

Blois came into the Bank of Italy system on December 8, 1919, as a member of the cashier's and inspection department. Later he was transferred to Visalia, where he became manager. In December, 1924, he was made manager of the College avenue branch in Oakland and in May, 1927, he was selected as manager of the San Mateo branch, one of the key branches of the system. From 1915 to 1917 Blois served in the offices of the state banking superintendent, retiring from that position to serve in the army during the World war.

RAISE SPEED LIMIT IN TWELVE STATES, ABOLISH IT IN FIVE

Maximum speed limits were abolished in five states in 1929, while an even dozen states raised the limit with the object of speeding up traffic, according to reports received by the California State Automobile Association. Indiana, Kansas, Tennessee, Vermont and Wisconsin now prescribe a speed that is "reasonable and proper." In effect this means that speed is not to be considered prima facie evidence of reckless driving, and such cases will be considered on their merits.

With improved highways and added safety qualities in motor cars, the tendency throughout the country has been to speed up traffic, and each year finds the legislatures of various states fostering proposals to abolish maximum speed laws.

States which increased their speed limits by action of the legislature during 1929 are: California, from 35 miles per hour to 40; Delaware, from 30 to 35; Illinois, from 35 to 45; Minnesota, from 35 to 45; Nebraska, from 35 to 45; Nevada, from 45 to 50; New Mexico, from 35 to 45; Ohio, from 35 to 45; Pennsylvania, from 35 to 40; South Dakota, from 25 to 40; Texas, from 35 to 45; and Virginia, from 35 to 45.

A total of eleven states do not prescribe maximum speed laws. These are: Connecticut, Florida, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Montana, Tennessee, Vermont, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

The limits in other states range from 20 miles an hour in Massachusetts to 50 miles per hour in Nevada, with the majority of the states placing the limit at between 35 and 45 miles an hour.

BIG MEN NOT WANTED

It may sound cynical, but it is a fact that the really capable men of the country are becoming extremely shy of politics and political jobs. Whenever a man who has made a success in life is proposed as a candidate for either election or appointment, he is immediately pounced upon by the demagogues and hounded without mercy.

The situation was sized up some time ago by Will Rodgers, who with his characteristic keen insight said of presidential appointments:

"Big men won't take them, for they won't take a chance on a Senate insult. If he has ever earned more than a Senator, he is in league with big business. If he ever drove a Standard Oil truck or was a bookkeeper in a Morgan bank he is in league with monopolies. If he is rich he is in league with the devil. But if he has never done anything and has been a financial failure at that, he will pass the Senate as a brother."

To the Citizens of San Mateo County: I wish to express my hearty thanks and sincere appreciation to all of my friends throughout San Mateo county for the generous support you gave me during the primary campaign just ended and at the polls on August 26. No candidate can be elected to public office on his own efforts alone. He must have the active support of a host of friends. I value your support in the past and trust that I will merit its continuance throughout the campaign preceding the general election, November 4.

Very sincerely yours,
JAMES S. JAMES.
Candidate for County Surveyor.

PARTRIDGES BEING BROUGHT IN FROM CZECHOSLAVAKIA

Hungarian partridges have shown such an aptitude for California's climate and feeding conditions that the Division of Fish and Game has purchased 600 birds in Czechoslavakia. The birds will arrive in New York harbor the coming November and will be rushed immediately to the coast.

Division officials say that the partridges will be given a chance to rest in the large pens at the Yountville game farm before being liberated. With the aid of sportsmen the birds will be planted in sections particularly suited to their kind.

These birds are slightly larger in size than our own California mountain quail. They are exceedingly fast on their feet, are extremely wild, and, according to sportsmen, are second to our state quail from a game standpoint. It will be the third planting of partridges in the past few years. Before liberation in this state, the birds were studied thoroughly by the Division as to their habits and food requirements. When it was learned that Hungarian partridges fed almost solely on insect life and created little or no crop damage, the Division consented to their introduction.

According to authorities it is almost impossible to raise these wild-natured birds in captivity. If properly introduced into selected territory the birds readily adapt themselves to their new conditions. They multiply very fast if given half a chance.

RADIO TELEPHONE SERVICE ACROSS THE PACIFIC OCEAN

Further details of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's plan for radio telephone service across the Pacific indicate that the American end of the new radio channel will be near San Francisco.

San Francisco to Sydney 6,272 miles; to Tokio, 4,472 miles; to Manila 6,047 miles; and to Honolulu 2,079 miles are some of the proposed circuits outlined in a report received by Manager L. M. Brown of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. Trans-Pacific calls from the Pacific Coast will pass over the Pacific Company's wires to the radio station.

The report indicates also that the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. will establish radio telephone service from ship-to-shore for both trans-Pacific and Coastwise vessels, and that probably a shore station for this communication will be set up on the Pacific Coast at an early date. Four vessels on the Atlantic now have this service, the Leviathan, Majestic, Olympic, and Homeric.

A telephone call around the world, covering 21,475 miles, over regular commercial circuits, will be possible when the San Francisco-Sydney channel is completed, togther with the London-Sydney circuit now being built by the British and Australian post offices.

To increase telephone connections so that ultimately any telephone subscriber may be able to talk with any part of the civilized world, is the aim of the Bell system, says Manager Brown. A world map of radio telephone channels now existing or under construction, or projected, accompanies the report and reveals a remarkable world network of channels.

SAN MATEO COUNTY NINTH IN POPULATION INCREASE

San Mateo county had the ninth highest increase in population, 40,354, of all California counties in the ten year period 1920 to 1930, according to a study of the Bureau of Census releases recently completed by the California Taxpayers' Association.

In percentage of population increase the county ranked second, showing a 110 per cent increase, or an increase from 36,781 in 1920 to 77,135 in 1930.

The state of California, according to the study, showed an increase of 65.5 per cent in population, going from 3,426,861 in 1920 to 5,672,009 in 1930, or an increase of 2,245,148. The increase in population for continental United States as a whole was but 16.1 per cent, total population in 1930 being 122,698,190 persons.

Two California counties showed population increases of over 100 per cent in the ten year period, Los Angeles and San Mateo, and fourteen counties, Los Angels, San Mateo, Monterey, Orange, San Bernardino, San Diego, Ventura, Del Norte, Riverside, Marin, Sacramento, Santa Barbara, Kern and Merced, showed increase sin population of 50 per cent or over.

DALY CITY SIXTY-FOURTH LARGEST CITY IN STATE

The city of Daly City is the sixty-fourth largest city in California, according to a study of census figures for the one hundred largest cities in California, recently completed by the California Taxpayers' Association.

Population of Daly City went from 3,779 in 1920 to 7,882 in 1930, or an increase of 109 per cent, the city showing the twenty-fith from the highest percentage of increase in population in the ten year period, 1920 to 1930.

DEER FLY FASTEST CREATURE; CAN DO 815 MILES PER HOUR

When it comes to getting places in a hurry, you can't beat the South American deer fly. This little fellow runs his errands at the rate of 815 miles per hour. That's faster than sound travels.

"The South Aemircan deer fly, an amazingly delicate yet powerful insect, has been timed at 815 miles an hour by Brazilian naturalists," writes George Trevor in Liberty Magazine.

"The deer fly, known to its intimates as Cephenemyia, could wing its way around the earth in seventeen hours if it had the stamina or the inclination. That's the time it took Frank Hawks to fly his Lockheed monoplane from Los Angeles to New York. Air cells attached to a microscopic skeleton give the deer fly buoyancy.

"Nature, the miraculous engineer, has endowed this fastest of all creatures with an 'engine' of such terrific power, in relation to weight, as to shame human designers. All you can see is a blur of color as the deer fly ghosts through the air at a velocity greater than that of sound! Sound wave travels at twelve miles a minute as against the deer fly's thirteen and a half."

SURPRISE SILVER SHOWER TENDERED MISS PARMISANO

On Thursday of last week Miss Rose Parmisano was the guest of honor at a silver bridal shower given by her sisters, Mrs. M. Rancatore, of Evergreen avenue, and Mrs. James Reardon, of Rice street, at the Reardoon home, which was beautifully decorated in palms and roses for the occasion.

The guests spent part of the evening enjoying a game of cards. Later in the evening refreshments were served in the banquet hall, which was artistically decorated. After the supper the guests enjoyed dancing. Miss Parmisano received a set of silverware for the table, one dozen each of everything. Mrs. B. Romiguiere, Mrs. E. Green and Mrs. Anthony Parmisano added to the complete set by presenting the bride-to-be a dozen butter spreaders and three serving spoons. The guest of honor's place at the table was marked by a bower of roses.

Those who enjoyed this delightful evening were: Mesdames M. Mohr, B. Doyle, A. Wolf, J. Gallo, A. Arata, E. Paganini, R. Cullen, A. Shaw, A. Bodien, A. Vernengo, H. Warren, J. Johnston, S. Wolf, A. CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

The Navy Department has set aside $500 to be used by Mare Island men in cutting up the old destroyer Corry. The metal secured from the boat will be sold as junk.

Figures released at the opening of the fall term of Eureka schools by City Superintendent of Schools George B. Albee, reveal an increase in registration totals over previous years. A total of 2817 students are enrolled.

An enrollment of 1026 pupils was rereported at the Richmond Union High School by B. X. Tucker, principal of the school. This figure shows a large increase over the enrollment for last year.

The Mare Island navy yard causeway repairs recently authorized by the bureau of yards and docks are being done by a crew on pile driver No. 4 under the supervision of Quarterman Wharfbuilder P. C. Anderson. The work involves about $250,000 worth of repairs.

Declaring that "the orderly development of a city can be developed only by forward thinking and confidence in the future of Fresno," Miles O. Humphrey, member of the Fresno city planning commission, predicted that Fresno is destined to become a city of 250,000 population or more.

The Fresno City Commission has refused to grant the petition of the Southern Pacific Railroad, asking that the company be allowed to run its trains through the city at a rate of twenty miles per hour. The refusal by the commission, however, is believed to be only temporary, pending completion of the Belmont avenue subway.

The early days of Glenn county were recalled when the Bank of Willows, one of the oldest financial institutions in the Sacramento Valley, filed a certificate of extension of its incorporation. The bank was organized September 2, 1880, and will be fifty years old on September 2 of this year. The extension will apply from July 10, 1930, to July 10, 1980.

Prepared to operate a general oil and petroleum business, incorporation of the Golden State Exploration Company Ltd. is on file with the secretary of state. The company, which is capitalized at $1,000,000, named the following Los Angeles directors: F. W. Courtney, H. J. Lewis, William Stevens, B. W. Kemper and A. S. Montague.

California, with 164 authorized airports, leads all other states in number of flying fields, according to compilation made in July, the Department of Commerce aeronautics branch announced. California airports include 56 municipal, 57 commercial, 27 intermediate, 15 auxiliary, six army and three navy fields. California exceeded all states in number of municipal, commercial and intermediate airports.

Marking another important unit in the state highway system, contract was awarded to the Lang Company of Los Angeles for grading forty miles at a cost of $261,612 in Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo counties. This project will give an adequate surfaced road over a large portion of the Cuyama lateral, which connects the Maricopa oil fields with the coast route at Santa Maria.

Boring a tunnel under the entire town of Newcastle, Placer county, was the unique engineering project ordered by B. B. Maak, director of public works, in his program of highway construction. The tunnel, to extend 531 feet under Newcastle, will be bored at a cost of $209,755. This project will eliminate steep grades and curves on the heavily traveled highway to Sierra.

A 10 per cent gain in enrollment at the Castro Valley grammar school over the same period last year has been noted, according to Principal A. B. Morris. About 275 boys and girls are present at the institution, a large number, however, missing from their classes, the majority presumably with their parents working in orchards and fields of the state. The total will exceed 300 when all have returned, Morris said.

During the first six months of this year, 127,213 persons were stopped on the highways of the state for various offenses, an average of 374 for each of the 340 officers employed, the California Highway Patrol announced. During the period the officers of the patrol rode a total of 3,513,681 miles in patrolling their beats. Of the motorists stopped, 7627 were for speeding, 53,494 for faulty lights, 15,631 for breaking rules of the road, 8224 for operating overloaded trucks, and 42,597 for other offenses.

To provide adequate fire protection for Beresford, officials of the Pacific Water Company will begin laying water mains within a short time. The project will cost $32,000. The Beresford district was recently annexed to San Mateo.

Measuring eleven feet from tip to tip, a male cougar was killed on Dodge ridge, three miles south of Pine Crest, by Charles Ledshaw, Tuolumne county big game hunter. Ledshaw recently killed two lions in the Cow Creek country near Strawberry.

The mill and logging operations of the Hobbs-Wall Company of Del Norte county resumed recently.

The streams of Del Norte county are being stocked with 153,000 rainbow and Eastern brook trout by Sheriff John W. Breen of Crescent City.

Sujerintendent M. C. Carter supervised the complete occupation of Humboldt's new $300,000 county hospital located at Eureka. It is a 100-bed, fireproof structure.

Santa Clara county's portion of the scenic Hecker Pass road will be completely paved within a short time, following letting of contract by the Board of Supervisors. The road will be paved to the summit. The Granite Construction Company of Watsonville was awarded the contract for $47,861.

Sonora's tax rate for 1930-31 is to be 11 cents lower than for last fiscal year in spite of the fact that the assessed valuation was raised from 35 per cent to 40 per cent. The rate will be $1.05 as compared with $1.16 last year. The reduction is due to the retirement of two street bonds.

Gravel mining in the Central Hill channel has been stimulated by the striking of pay dirt in two mines near Angels Camp. At the Calmo Mining Company's mine, active operations have been started, following the pay dirt find. The Oversight mine, east of the Calmo, has encountered gold-bearing gravel, and efforts are being made to reopen this section of the company's holdings.

San Jose building permits this year so far have totaled $2,719,810, exceeding by $251,655, or 11 per cent, the total issued during the entire year of 1929. The 1930 total was swelled by issuance of a $250,000 permit for additions to the Roosevelt Junior High School, and indications point toward a new building record for the year.

Yountville, scene of the state's $2,000,000 rebuilding program for the Soldiers' Home, arranged for light on its streets at night. Supervisor Arthur Imrie, on behalf of the county, ordered the Napa Valley Electric Company to install ten street lights. They will be ready for operation shortly.

Trans-Pacific Communication Company, Ltd., announcing plans for establishment of wire and radio systems, filed incorporation papers at the Capitol from San Francisco. Plans were indicated for communication particularly involving California and Hawaii. Directors are John A. Sutro and Maurice D. L. Fuller, San Francisco; Northbert Korte, Oakland; Samuel L. Wright, Atherton, and Alfred Tanner, Berkeley.

An enthusiastic gathering of fifty of the leading business men of Chico organized for support of the Deer Creek road project, a short-cut between Chico and Lassen National Park. The undertaking has met with opposition from two of the county supervisors and is hindered at present by litigation. Funds for its support were voted at the Chico meeting.

California has established record progress in rehabilitating crippled children. Clinics are being held in all parts of the state to recommend treatment of handicapped children, it was announced by Dr. Walter M. Dickie, state health director. "This service is rehabilitating large numbers of California children who might otherwise have been forced to suffer all their lives and eventually become financial burdens to their families and the state," Dr. Dickie reported.

Pronouncing these institutions in better condition than in most sections of the nation, state health officials completed inspection of county tuberculosis hospitals in California which receive a state subsidy of $3 weekly per patient. This survey revealed more than 4000 subsidized tuberculosis beds in California hospitals, with California maintaining more free beds for tuberculous children than any other state.

The imposing shell of the Bret Harte Hotel at Pino Grande, designed and partly completed by A. P. T. Elder, the eccentric millionaire, almost ten years ago, but left untouched since his sudden death, is doomed to ruin and decay. Lewis Shaw, who has been acting as caretaker for the four-story rambling structure, reports he has received instructions from Mrs. Elder, now living at Newport, R. I., to abandon the place.

The Salinas city council has approved a city tax rate of $2 for the 1930-1931 fiscal year, the same rate of the last three years. According to an official estimate, $170,000 will be spent in operation of the city during the year. The council also passed a resolution to donate to the state a $40,000 site and $10,000 in cash for the erection of a combined state armory and civic auditorium. The resolution carries the provision that the state erect a building costing not less than $60,000.

A prominent peak in Castlecrags, three miles west of Castella, was christened MacFadden Peak in honor of Bernarr MacFadden of New York. MacFadden has purchased a $7000 revolving beacon to be placed on top of the peak as a beacon on the airway.

The exploration well of the Red Head Oil Company, a concern made up of Happy Valley ranchers, was spudded in at Olinda, near Redding. The company has a community lease covering several thousand acres of the rich agriculture and fruit belt.

BATTLE OF KINGS MOUNTAIN
OCTOBER 7, 1780
Sketch made in April 1928
by Lt Col. H.L.Landers, F.A.
Historical section Army War College.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON OCTOBER 7 the attention of the nation will be centered on a rocky hillside in the extreme northern part of South Carolina where will be celebrated the sesquicentennial of a brilliant American victory in the War of Independence. The principal speaker at the commemorative exercises will be President Herbert Hoover, whose words will be heard by thousands of Americans, since his address is to be broadcast over a nationwide hookup. The event which will thus be recalled is the battle of Kings Mountain on October 7, 1780, when a force of some 900 American frontiersmen surrounded an army of more than 1,100 British Provincial troops and Tory militia, commanded by Maj. Patrick Ferguson, a British regular, killed and wounded 334 and took the remainder prisoners while suffering a loss of only 28 killed and 62 wounded.

The battle of Kings Mountain was one of the most dramatic engagements in our struggle for liberty, both as to the actors in it and the manner in which it was fought. Compared to other battles, so far as the number of participants is concerned, it was only a small affair, but its results were so momentous as to make it one of the outstanding events of the whole seven years' conflict. The victory came at a dark hour in the struggle for liberty. In the north Benedict Arnold had turned traitor. Raids through New York by the British and Tories were a serious threat to the rear of Washington's army. Some of his Continentals, worn down by hardships which seemed to come from congressional neglect, were becoming mutinous. In the south the British had virtually completed the subjugation of South Carolina and Georgia. Clinton had captured Charleston and Tarleton had cut to pieces the forces of the noted partisan, Sumter. With only scattered bands of patriot forces in the field, Cornwallis proceeded with the invasion of North Carolina.

As a part of his plan Maj. Patrick Ferguson had been sent toward the back country of the Carolinas to crush any patriot opposition which might develop, but primarily to rally the Tories and recruit them to his forces. Ferguson was very successful in his work. His original force had consisted of 125 picked officers and men, taken from several regular battalions raised in New York and New Jersey and formed into a temporary provincial corps. Within a short time he had been joined by nearly 1,000 Tory militia to whom he gave a certain amount of training. The partiots were making desperate efforts to oppose his advance. Col. Charles McDowell of Burke county, North Carolina, was on the Broad river just over the South Carolina line when he heard of Ferguson's advance. He sent a hasty call for help across the mountains to John Sevier and Isaac Shelby, leaders of the pioneers who had settled on the Nolichucky, the Watauga, the Holston and the French Broad in what is now eastern Tennessee.

Sevier had had his hands full fighting the Cherokees, but he sent 200 men to McDowell's aid and Shelby crossed over with a similar force from Sullivan county. There was a short period of guerilla fighting in which Shelby won a minor success at Musgrove's Mills. Then came the news of Cornwallis' crushing defeat of Gates at Camden. Shelby and McDowell were forced to flee to the mountains, closely pursued by Ferguson, to avoid being crushed between that officer and Cornwallis. Ferguson next advanced to Gilbert Town and there made the big mistake of his campaign. He paroled a kinsman of Shelby's and sent him home with a letter in which he informed the "Back Water Men," as he called them, that if they did not "desist from their opposition to British arms, he would march his army across the mountains, hang the leaders and lay the country waste with fire and sword."

The response to this threat was instantaneous, if not what Ferguson had expected. These hardy frontiersmen were not the kind to be frightened easily.

When Shelby received Ferguson's letter he rode posthaste to Sevier for a conference. The two leaders resolved to muster their forces and strike Ferguson before he could secure enough reinforcements to carry out his threat to invade their country. Messengers were sent to Col. William Campbell on the Clinch river in Virginia for aid. The call to arms was carried to every settlement west of the mountains. Sycamore Shoals on the Watauga was set as the rendezvous and there on September 26 gathered more than 1,000 frontiersmen, armed with the "long rifle" of deadly accuracy. Nearly all of them were mounted and as they swung into their saddles to ride against the invader their pastor, Rev. Samuel Doak, sped them on their way with this benediction, "With the Sword of the Lord and of Gideon!"

Soon after they crossed the summit of the mountains they discovered that two Tories in their midst had slipped away to carry a warning to Ferguson. There was more need now than before for speed, so they pushed on rapidly to Quaker Meadows where they were joined by Colonel Cleveland with the men from Wilkes county, North Carolina, and by Major Winston with the men from Surrey, some 350 in all.

Meanwhile the two deserters had reached Ferguson and when he heard of the force that was coming against him he realized what a hornet's nest he had stirred up by his letter from Gilbert Town. So he left that place and started to retreat south and east toward Charlotte Town, where Cornwallis had arrived on September 22. By October 6 he had reached Kings Mountain.

On this same date, October 6, the mountain men reached Cowpens where they were joined by Col. James Williams of South Carolina with 400 men who had been in pursuit of Ferguson. This detachment was made up of groups of Sumter's men from South Carolina under Colonels Hill and Lacey, of men from Lincoln county under Graham, Hambright and Chronicle. Upon being informed of Ferguson's position the American leaders decided that a quick dash was necessary if they were to catch Ferguson before he joined Cornwallis. Accordingly they selected 900 of the best horsemen and at eight o'clock that night they started on their march. Rain poured down upon them, but they pressed steadily on and about noon the next day the weather cleared and the sun came out to shine upon their splendid exploit.

Early in the afternoon they discovered the enemy on Kings Mountain. It was a table land about 600 yards long, 60 to 120 feet wide, rising some 60 feet above its immediate surroundings, a natural fortress, its sides covered with trees and its top protected by huge rocks. The mountain men dismounted at the foot of the mountain, tied their horses under the trees and prepared for the attack. The plan agreed upon was to surround the hill and trap the defenders with a ring of fire as the ever-tightening circle of riflemen ascended the slope.

About three o'clock the battle began. As Ferguson's outposts discovered the Americans, he sprang to his horse, blowing his whistle to call his men to arms. His riflemen opened fire, but with little effect upon the mountain men who were gliding from tree to tree, Indian-fashion, and firing whenever they caught the slightest glimpse of the enemy. Ferguson's men, firing down hill, were overshooting their targets constantly while the mountain men, accustomed to shooting squirrels out of the tallest trees, were handling their long rifles with deadly effectiveness.

Ferguson next tried bayonet charges, but the frontiersmen simply gave way until the charge had spent its force, then returned, taking their toll as the British retired. Ferguson was everywhere, blowing his whistle to encourage his men and his voice could be plainly heard above the sharp crack of the rifles and the Indian-like warwhoops of the mountain men. Captain De Peyster, Ferguson's second in command, had fought such men as these at Musgrove's Mills and at the sound of the Americans' voices he is said to have remarked to Ferguson, "These things are ominous; these are the d—d yelling boys!"

There were others in his command who knew that the fight would soon be lost. Two white handkerchiefs affixed to bayonets were raised aloft but Ferguson angrily slashed them down with his sword. Two horses were shot under the British leader, but he mounted another and continued his efforts to rally his men. Finally as a last effort to snatch victory from defeat, he with several of his officers turned their horses down hill and tried to cut their way through the Americans. Ferguson was shot from his horse and instantly killed. De Peyster then advanced with a white flag and surrendered his sword to Campbell.

Kings Mountain has become something of a legend in our history, with all the inaccuracy and misinformation which that implies. For instance, some writers, taking their cue from local tradition which has done so much to preserve those inaccuracies, have called it the "Turning Point of the Revolution," thus appropriating for this single battle in the south the distinction accorded by most historians to a whole campaign—the series of engagements in New York in 1777 which culminated in the surrender of Burgoyne.

Fortunately, however, for a better understanding of the significance of Kings Mountain and of the details of the battle, which have become obscured by historians writing on hearsay evidence, there has appeared in recent months a history of the fight, written from the military point of view, which corrects many of these errors and places this battle in its proper perspective. It is the work of Lieut. Col. H. L. Landers of the United States Army war college who, as the result of congressional action looking forward to making this battleground a national military park, was directed to prepare a historical statement concerning the battle for the War department.

The findings of this army historian apparently do not justify the "Turning Point of the Revolution" characterization of the battle of Kings Mountain. But he does say this: "The battle of Kings Mountain was the outstanding victory of the Americans in 1780. Following it, Cornwallis was compelled to bandon North Carolina, and for a time to assume the defensive. It put an end to the possibility of an eventual peace with England under such terms as might have resulted in the retention of the southern provinces under British rule. It is an exemplification of American aspirations for self-government and a display of romantic hardihood and bravery well worthy of the careful study of American youth."

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME

After all, what greater thrill is there in life than doing a kindness for one's fellow man? A good deed is stimulating to the soul of the one who does it. No greater heritage can be left to our children than a reputation for being kind, generous and denevolent.

The American citizen of this generation should be proud to be living and doing his part in making this the greatest era of benevolence in human history. For this generation has met with a full hand the most sacred obligations of man—charity. The gifts to churches, hospitals, institutions for the care of the less fortunate, and to the relief of suffering humanity the world over, have surpassed by hundreds of millions any sums for similar purposes for any like period in the history of mankind.

America stands today as the world's greatest benefactor, and the citizens of Daly City, in co-operation with millions of other kind people throughout the entire country, have enabled the nation to achieve this enviable distinction. May Daly City always be known as a community with a heart—a community that responds to the cries of suffering regardless of where the call may come from.

While we must hearken to the cry for aid the world over, we must take care that we do not become oblivious to the needs of less fortunate neighbors right here in Daly City. Charity still begins at home, and there could be no higher aim of charity for the people of Daly City than to properly care for the needy ones of our community, and finally to abolish poverty altogether.

Local charity should not be considered an individaul effort, but a co-operative community effort. And through the co-operation of every resident contributing his time and resources as best he can, we can achieve a standard of charity in this community that will cause Daly City to be stamped indelibly upon the minds of all as a Community with a Heart.

GOT HIM AT LAST

After several years of unsuccessful efforts to get a local hardware merchant to advertise, the publisher of a Kansas weekly newspaper recently was surprised to receive an order for a full-page advertisement from the former non-advertiser.

Glancing at the copy the publisher saw that it advertised a "closing out sale." The hardware man was going out of business. His advertising competitors had taken his trade and there was nothing left for him to do but quit. So the newspaper man had landed his prospect at last.

The merchant recognized the power of advertising to help him to get out of business, but had never tried to use it as a means of staying in business. There are a good many merchants like that.

And these merchants wonder why they are failures.

LABOR DAY

Although Labor Day as we know it in America was first celebrated less than a half-century ago the parade which usually accompanies its observance might well be considered as a revival of medieval processions of the craft-guilds in England and on the continent of Europe.

While there is some differences of opinion among labor historians themselves as to the exact origin of Labor Day, it appears that its first observance was a parade by the Central Labor Union of New York in 1882.

The idea spread and in 1887 Colorado passed the first law making the day a legal holiday. In 1894 Congress made Labor Day a holiday in the District of Columbia and in all Federal departments, since which time nearly all states have given the day official recognition.

Celebrated on the first Monday in September, Labor Day has long been widely observed, especially in cities where trade unions flourish, with parades, speeches, games and general picnics in which all classes take part.

It is the nation's annual tribute to its vast army of workers—a fitting recognition of the dignity of honest toil.

WORLD'S BEST LOSER

For undiluted sportsmanship we must give the palm to Sir Thomas Lipton, the gallant Irishman who will again contend for the America's Cup, the most coveted yachting prize in the world.

It is now 79 years since the famous cup was first won by an American boat, appropriately named the America, on August 2, 1851, and in the intervening years it has been successfully defended 13 times.

Beginning in 1899, Sir Thomas Lipton has made four attempts to lift the cup without success, and the forthcoming races starting September 13 will mark his fifth. That he has accepted successive defeats with equanimity and is willing to risk another leads Will Rogers to dub him "the best loser on earth."

After his first defeat in 1899, Sir Thomas came back in 1901 and 1903 to meet the same fate. He challenged for 1914, but the war upset his plans. He was again a contender in 1920, losing once more. Each time his yacht has been named the Shamrock, his newest challenger being the Shamrock V.

While patriotic Americans will hope to see the famed cup remain on this side of the water, there will be no great sorrow if the pluck and determination of Sir Thomas shall be finally rewarded by victory.

LINCOLN AND STANTON

Lincoln's reliance upon Stanton, his great secretary of war, is well known. They did not always agree, however, and Stanton seems to have felt entirely free to oppose his chief upon occasion.

Some official correspondence dug up by a writer for the Boston Herald is remarkable for its illustration of this point, as well as being an indication that few words were wasted by these giants in making their respective views known. It seems that Lincoln wanted a certain man apponted an Army chaplain. Stanton objected, with apparent success, as the correspondence quoted indicates:

"Dear Stanton: Appoint this man chaplain in the Army. A. Lincoln."

"Dear Mr. Lincoln: He is not a preacher. E. M. Stanton."

"Dear Stanton: He is now. A. Lincoln."

"Dear Mr. Lincoln: But there is no vacancy. E. M. Stanton."

"Dear Stanton: Appoint him chaplain-at-large. A. Lincoln."

"Dear Mr. Lincoln: There is no warrant in law for that. E. M. Stanton."

"Dear Stanton: Appoint him anyhow. A. Lincoln."

"Dear Mr. President: I will not. E. M. Stanton."

RURAL BOY SCOUTS

Good progress is being made in a number of states in the extension of scouting activities to the rural districts, through the training of Lone Scouts who are unable to meet frequently with their fellows for group exercises.

At present there are thirty-six merit badges awarded for subjects suitable for the farm boy's pursuit, such as fire fighting on the farm, or adjacent forests, tree culture, bird protection, clean-up programs and many others.

One more practical and useful piece of work recommended is the preparation of cabinets containing first aid kits for use in case of injury to persons or animals. At each home where a Boy Scout has such a cabinet a sign is placed, so that passers-by may know that in case of accident first aid may be obtained there.

The Boy Scout organization is directing these Lone Scouts through a special department of rural scouting, which provides a program diversified enough to meet the needs of any boy, no matter how remote the locality in which he lives.

This movement is a most worthy and beneficial one, deserving of all encouragement and co-operation by parents and teachers.

TOO MUCH RED TAPE

Thoughtful citizens can not fail to look with concern upon the ever increasing tendency of governmental agencies to restrict and "regulate" our daily activities, which are becoming more and more enmeshed in a maze of red tape.

Practically every new law passed by Congress or state legislatures is designed to further extend this paternal supervision by innumerable commissions, boards and bureaus, many of which have no valid reason for existence, except that they make jobs to fatten the public payroll.

Among the many persons of prominence who have protested against these indefensible encroachments upon the liberties of the people is Governor Theodore Christiansen of Minnesota, who recently said:

"I emphatically disapprove of the numerous and petty regulations with which little bureaucrats in Washington annoy and harass business, big and little."

The fact is that these burdensome regulations are not the result of any demand on the part of the public, but are originated by politicians who seek the limelight and are ambitious to have their names identified with restrictive laws on every conceivable subject.

It is time that the people themselves should call a halt to this sort of thing, by the only means at their command—the ballot. If a few law-crazy legislators were relegated to private life we might eventually obtain relief from the law-making orgy of recent years, which has cost the public millions of dollars and untold annoyance, with no corresponding benefits in any respect.

OUR BIGGEST CITIES

Census reports show some striking changes of rank among the cities of the country as compared with 1920 figures. The relative standing of the first four, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Detroit, is unchanged, but Los Angeles jumps from tenth place to fifth, displacing Cleveland.

Most notable gains are shown by sevreal Southern cities, including Atlanta, Houston, Dallas, Birmingham, San Antonio, Memphis, and Fort Worth. Populations of Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Chattanooga and Tampa were approximately doubled during the decade, while Miami showed the geratest relative gain among the larger cities, rising from 29,571 to 110,025 and in rank from 255th to 77th.

The United States now has five cities with more than a million population, 13 with more than half a million, 38 with more than a quarter of a million, and 93 with more than 100,000. Including the above, there are 361 cities with more than 25,000 population.

Census figures do not always give an accurate idea of the number of persons living in the various metropolitan areas, however, as in many cases the incorporated city overflows into adjacent counties and this suburban population is not included in the census count, although practically a part of the city concerned.

WHO OWNS THE STOCKS

It is popularly supposed, no doubt, that in the stock crash last fall most of the losers were the little fellows who were novices at the game of speculation. While many small fry were caught in the panic, it now appears that the heaviest losers were more experienced professionals.

An interesting sidelight is the fact that thousands of small investors took advantage of the drop of stock prices and bought at low levels while the professionals were unloading out of necessity. Some interesting results are shown by a recent count of stockholders of several leading corporations.

Today Montgomery Ward has more than six times as many stockholders as it had a year ago; General Motors has more than three times as many; International Telegraph three times as many, while United Gas, Electric Bond & Share and other utilities have more than twice as many stockholders as they had this time last year.

These new stockholders bought when prices were low, and most of them bought for permanent investment, not for speculation. They are receiving good dividends on their investments, so it appears that the past year has shown the little fellow from Main Street to be smarter than some of the big fellows in Wall Street.

WHITE HOUSE DOGS

Recent occupants of the White House have been fond of dogs, the Hoovers having the largest assortment of all, of which Patrick, an Irish wolf hound, may be said to be the "first dog of the land." At any rate he wears the District of Columbia license tag No. 1.

President Harding's favorite was Laddie Boy, an airedale; President Coolidge was partial to Rob Roy, a white collie; President Hoover was greatly attaced to King Tut, but he died and has been succeeded by Patrick.

Among other White House dogs of the present are Inglehurst Gillette, a Gordon setter; Mark, an English setter; Pat, a German police dog, and a new one of the same breed as yet unnamed.

It may be recalled that the oratorical fame of the late Senator Vest of Missouri rests chiefly upon a speech he once made to a jury in behalf of a client whose dog had been killed by a neighbor. In the course of that speech he said:

"The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog."

It might be added that most great men are fond of dogs—certainly all good men are.

Women are cheerful losers—of adipose tissue.

"THE CRIMSON HOUR" COMING TO THE CURRAN, SEPTEMBER 8

Pauline Frederick's appearances at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, beginning Monday night, September 8, in the Shipman-Hymer drama, "The Crimson Hour," under the sponsorship of Belasco and Curran, promises a rare evening in the theatre.

It is reported that the distinguished star has never been more ideally suited to a stellar role than in her latest vehicle. Though modern in treatment, it is reminiscent of her famed "Madam X." Her consummate artistry and noted emotional powers will have full latitude in this absorbing story of a mother with a "past," renounced by her own daughter. As a successful woman attorney of today, Mary Bancroft defends a little night club dancer on a sensational murder charge, neither knowing they are mother and daughter until the defendant is on the witness stand. The unexpected developments during the trial are said to culminate in a startling climax and a scene which will pluck at the heart-strings of even the most hardened playgoer.

The entertainment qualities of the offering are enhanced by a dual love story and a sprinkling of comedy, but it is stated that Miss Frederick's portrayal with its tense and sustained emotion will take on the character of a memorable theatrical event for all lovers of superlative acting.

A large and splendid company will be seen in support of the fascinating star, with handsome Huntley Gordon featured in the role of the district attorney. A lavish production is promised with the staging in the hands of Gordon Davis.

Jokes about women being poor drivers are entirely out of order, according to the Pennsylvania commissioner of motor vehicles. He declared that while one-fourth of the drivers in the state are women, they were responsible for only 32 out of 915 accidents in the first six months of this year.

SCHOOL TRAFFIC RESERVES ON DUTY FOR THE FALL TERM

Thousands of selected school boys in all parts of Northern and Central California are being assembled as members of the school traffic reserve. With the fall school terms already begun or soon to open, training of the young "soldiers of safety" to protect their smaller schoolmates from traffic daugers is actively under way in more than fifty cities and towns and the adjacent rural areas.

Under the direction of the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association, in cooperation with school and police authorities and the State Motor Vehicle Department, squads of school traffic reserves are being organized and new members chosen to fill the ranks depleted each term by graduations.

In most places where the schools have opened boys of the traffic reserve have already assumed the duty of patrolling crossings near the schools, where they may be seen before and after classes and during the noon hour escorting groups of their younger comrades safely across streets and highways.

Each of the traffic reservists is distinguised by the yellow arm band suppled by the motorists' organization. The distinction of wearing the insignia has come to be regarded as a coveted honor, as the boys are selected according to high standards of scholarship and all around efficiency.

There will be more than 5,000 of these junior traffic officers on duty when all the schools are opened. Since the reserve was first formed, records of traffic injuries to children have shown a distinct decrease. The public safety department of the Automobile Association has issued a general appeal to motorists to co-operate with the boys of the reserve in their work.

Sheep without tails were developed after many years of careful breeding. Which shows what may be accomplished by keeping a definite end in view.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."
But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.
Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. Edwards' Drug Store, Mission street, near San Jose avenue. —Adv.

Charity Begins at Home

The most charitable and philanthropic individual in all the world is the American citizen. Many times each year the cry for aid comes through the ether waves from all four corners of the earth and as soon as these distress signals reach our ears, America responds generously, bountifully. Regardless of when a catastrophe may strike, no matter where starving women and children may be in need; America responds immediately. We succor the needy, we relieve distress, we feed the starving, whenever the need arises, the world over. America is the world's greatest benefactor. May this national characteristic be forever one of the outstanding qualities of the American citizen!

An analysis shows that while we are promoting the welfare of humanity in far lands, often we overlook those in dire distress in our immediate locality. Charity should begin at home. We are foregoing one of life's greatest opportunities if we fail to answer the cries of our needy neighbors. What more worthy charity can be found than to restore the minimum standards of living to every family in our own town.

In the average community, from five to ten per cent of all families are in need of charitable assistance. The chief causes of this poverty are: Unemployment, sickness and family difficulties. Temporary financial assistance, proper care, counsel and advice fulfill the charitable needs of most charity cases.

The leading cause of poverty—unemployment—may be eliminated, as has been pointed out, by building a bigger and better community. Every member of this community should have the opportunity to earn. Constant employment should be offered to every citizen.

Of next importance in the elimination of poverty, is to keep people employable—that is, physically, mentally and morally fit. Sickness is largely preventable. However, in cases where the community has a standard of health and prevention measures, and charitable assistance is necessary on account of sickness, then trained medical charity is necessary. There is no greater corps of unacknowledged, unselfish, conscientious charity workers than the doctors, dentists, nurses and hospitals in every community.

About one-third of all charity cases are the result of mismanagement of personal and family affairs. These cases can best be handled through the personal contact of church leaders, civic and commercial organizations and the sympathetic understanding of individual citizens and business men.

The best form of charity and social welfare work of which a community can boast lies in simple, friendly, neighborly advice and help; the counsel of the church, the interest of the school, and help on the part of the employer and the merchant—this is a real form of social service.

When we are called upon to contribute our time and money for local charity, let's all rsspond immediately and gladly. Let's help create a "Community With a Heart" for

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist. Her sister, Lillian, urges her to break off the affair, but Ernestine refuses. A runaway marriage follows. Loring Hamilton wins Lillian's consent to become his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in humble surroundings. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort. Ernestine and Will have their first quarrel as a result. Will's father dies suddenly. Lillian and Loring are married. Will's mother dies almost immediately after Ernestine's baby is born. Changes in Will's office fail to bring advancement. Ernestine again is looking forward to motherhood. Will loses his job and Poole resigns. Ernestine faints on the street.

"Mr. Hamilton's got a taxi for us out there—had it since six o'clock. I don't know how much this'll cost him."

"That doesn't matter," said Lillian impatiently, and tried to control her perturbation. She was disturbed anew at the thought of Loring violent, uncontrolled—she had never seen him so, except on the other occasion of his quarrel with Will. But this was worse. He had always been so fond of Ernestine—as though she were his own little sister. She felt a great relief to think that he had taken charge of the search. He would find Ernestine if she were to be found.

But the thought of her sister out in these hot streets, lost, ill and alone, caused her such anguish that she could scarcely breathe. What would mamma say to her? Mamma loved Ernestine the better—always had. Mamma had really left Ernestine to her.

The door was flung open and Loring stood there. His eyes were glittering with fear or fever. He looked at her as if he scarcely knew her.

"Lillian!" he exclaimed.

"I drove," she told him, "all the way. I've been so worried."

"You had cause to worry," he said grimly. "When we find Ernestine she is going home with us—to stay. Don't you agree? She's got to have somebody to take care of her."

"Of course, Loring."

"I've news of a sort," he said slowly, and they stared at him. "I don't know what it's worth. There was a woman taken to the County hospital this afternoon—from this neighborhood. She was a young woman, and she was to be confined. It might have been Ernestine. I've sent Will out there, and I came by to see if you were here"—to his wife—"and to wait here for a phone call."

The telephone shrilled, and the sound leaped through them all. Mrs. Bennett picked up the receiver with a trembling hand, while they all watched her in straining silence.

"Yes—yes—this is Mrs. Bennett. . . . Oh, he did. . . . Oh, thank you. . . . Her sister is here. I'll tell them."

She turned from the phone.

"It's the hospital office. Will has identified Ernestine, and he's there with her. Oh, Mr. Hamilton—you found her!"

"Get your hat," said Loring. "And come with us. Never mind your keys, Lillian. We'll take the taxi."

At the hospital an interne was very businesslike.

"Her husband has identified her. Yes, he is with her now. No, you can't come in—well, only for a moment."

There lay Ernestine in the stiff, long-sleeved, hospital shirt, her hair black between her white face and the white pillow, a nurse beside her counting her respiration, Will crouching there, his face against the covers. Her eyes were opened, flushed with fever. She was talking—pleading—in delirium. Ernestine, the darling sister—in this dreadful place!

"You will all have to go," said the nurse, snapping shut her old-fashioned watch and darting a resentful look at the interne. "We cannot have anybody in this ward after hours. Mr. Todd, you will have to go."

"Ernestine," cried Lillian, and Ernestine said quickly:

"Will's coming. I tell you my name is Briceland B-r-i-c-e-l-a-n-d—I think there's more. The bus ran over me—it leaped at me—"

"She was crushed?" exclaimed Lillian, and the nurse said:

"No—she's just delirious. Please go."

"Can't we have her moved to a private room? Can't we move her?" It was Loring now.

Will had lifted his face, and he stared at Ernestine and gently smoothed her cheek, while her bright eyes turned on him.

"Papa—you must find Will—he'll worry," she urged him.

"I can't say about moving her. You'll have to see the floor doctor. She is very ill to be moved—please leave the ward now."

The nurse was definite. Training and authority were behind her, and they withdrew. Even Will had to leave her, but Ernestine made such an outcry that the nurse permitted him to come back until Loring should make arrangements to move Ernestine.

Lillian found herself in a tiny reception room furnished barely. Loring had gone to the office, Mrs. Bennett to the phone booth downstairs. For a moment Lillian thought she was going to be sick. She clung desperately to the arms of the chair. She was the only woman in the room. A black man stood near her, twisting a cloth cap in his hands, his lips moving soundlessly. There was another man, shabby, unclean, suffering in patient silence, and they were joined by a third and then a fourth vague quiet figure.

Lillian's feelings were not of pity but revulsion. She could not bear it—Ernestine here with the scum of the earth—mamma's baby—their beauty—in this place that smelled of lysol, that was as full of the sounds of sickness and suffering as purgatory is full of groans. This place was hell, it was nightmare. There came from the streets the clang of an ambulance—and a stretcher moved in the hall. Loring was beside her, beckoning.

"We are taking her to the Presbyterian hospital. They'll have a room and a nurse for her when we get there. Also a good doctor."

Lillian followed him in confusion. The ambulance she had heard was for Ernestine. The taxi threaded after it through the streets, and again there was delay. Mrs. Bennett left them to go back home. Will was with Ernestine and the stretcher. But now, at last, a small freshly painted room, as clean as a scalded dish, a high narrow bed, by an open window, an electric fan on a white dressing table, a chair or two, and a graduate nurse, capable, cool. There was a doctor, too.

Lillian stood just inside the door. The doctor was silent for a long time, examining Ernestine, reading the copy of the chart that had been sent with her.

"Uremea—and some albumen," he said as though any of them knew what he meant. "The baby will be premature—if we can get her through her confinement now swiftly, she'll be all right. When did you say she was expectant?"

Will named the date. The doctor nodded with satisfaction as though his worst fears were confirmed.

"Well, it's a nasty case," he said, "but perhaps we shall pull her through. Miss Nana"—he turned to the nurse with a rapid fire of instructions and requests and laid his coat aside. "Now—there's nothing any of you can do but give us elbow room and quiet. She's already had two convulsions. When the next comes we shall be ready for her—" The horrid word shot through Lillian's mind like a sword thrust. No—no—only idiot children—only diseased and terrible people—only the poor and helpless were so afflicted. Not Ernestine—oh, God—not Ernestine!

The doctor put them out with deliberate firmness, allowing Will to stay.

"If you go across the street, there's a nice little hotel there. Tell the clerk I sent you, and go to bed. Miss Nana will call you if there's any change, or if she's delivered. The battle is ours, now."

Lillian knew that it was as hard for Loring as it was for her to accept this dismissal and leave Will behind. Will was so futile! He would have left her in that other dreadful place.

In silence they crossed the street, registered at the hotel, and were assigned a room. They moved about in silent misery, looking out of the windows at the walls of the hospital.

"Did you know Will lost his job?"

Loring hesitated. "Yes," he said at last. "I knew it."

"But why—"

"I didn't know how Ernestine would take it, if I butted in. I thought she would let us know if she needed us."

"You know how proud she is—"

Loring moved restlessly. "I think I'll go back to the hospital. You stay here. No need for both of us to go. I'll call you if you're needed."

Weary and confused, Lillian took off her clothes, bathed in the tiny bathroom and lay down across the bed, partly dressed again. Her whole thought was strained at first toward the hospital and the possible issue of Ernestine's illness. Then her thoughts turned and turned, from Loring to Ernestine, to Will, to mamma and papa and Ernestine and back to mamma again. Mamma had allowed papa and Loring to dictate to her about Will's father. That had really separated Ernestine from them long ago. They had offered Ernestine their love and help only at the price of betrayal of her marriage. Tears came to Lillian, and eventually, tired and sad, she fell asleep.

Daylight streaming over her bed wakened her. She rose, dressed, went across to the hospital and asked for Will, wondering as she did so whether or not she should have asked for Loring.

Will came to her in the reception room, looking at her from dull heavy eyes, silent, waiting.

"How is Ernestine, Will?" she asked him softly.

"She is still very ill," he answered, and added as an afterthought: "The baby is a girl."

He was exhausted, unshaved, sad and awry. As he stood there looking vaguely about him he seemed to Lillian the most forlorn and helpless human being she had ever seen. She pitied him, but he vexed her.

"Oh, Will," she said impulsively, "you shouldn't have allowed Ernestine to have this other baby—so soon, when you weren't prepared. You should have protected her." He averted his face, but she saw his flush.

"I've got to go back upstairs," he said, and added, as he turned to the door, "Loring has already lectured me on birth control. He's left the hospital. You must have missed him."

Lillian was ashamed. She had not intended to say such a thing. It was none of their business, really. At the hotel she stopped at the desk for the key, but Loring had it. She went up in the quiet elevator. When she opened the unlocked door of their room and went in, Loring was lying back in a chair by the open window, his hat on the floor beside him, his collar and tie lying upon it. He was staring straight before him, and when Lillian came to his side he looked up at her with a piteous expression.

For a moment, standing there, a dart of such pain went through Lillian that she cried out. This was what Ernestine could do to Loring. She knew, with a gripping pang of conviction, that nothing that could ever happen to her would cause him such anguish—such rout. This was what Will meant when he said that he knew what was the matter with Loring! She fell on her knees beside him, sobbing, and laid her face upon his knee. His hand fell on her shoulders. He mistook her fear and pain.

"She'll be all right, Lillian," he whispered. "God grant she will! The doctor said that a day or two will tell. It's uremic poisoning."

He sat forward in his chair, and his clenched hand fell on one knee, while the other arm held her convulsively.

"Thank God you weren't there. Thank God you will never know how she suffered. Will fainted once, and the nurse brought me into the room. They were fighting death like a physical foe. I helped to hold her—" He gave a stifled cry and tore the buttons from his shirt as he expanded his lungs against the crushing fear that lay upon him.

"Oh, Lillian," he cried to his wife, "I don't see how she can live—after last night. The doctor thinks she will, and so does Doctor Grey. He's with her now. But I don't see how she can survive that struggle. But one thing is settled for us, for ever." He pulled her tear-wet face up from his knee, and looked at her with blazing eyes. "You and I will have to be enough. No child is worth such anguish. No life is worth—death. No children—for us."

She hid her face against him. Her arms held him close.

"I don't care, if only you will love me."

He pressed her to him but his eyes had flown to the windows of the hospital, and she felt a tremor pass through his big frame.

* * * * * * *

Ernestine stayed in the hospital until the baby was a month old. Will borrowed the money from Mr. Poole and paid the hospital bill, paid the nurse and the two doctors, the day she was to be discharged. Loring protested in vain. The removal to the expensive private hospital had been his suggestion—it was he who got the nurse, who got the two doctors; he had planned to meet all these expenses. But Will was deaf to him. He was going to pay Ernestine's hospital bill, he declared, if he had to rob a bank. What business was it of Loring's? It was Will's wife—Will's child.

Legally the debt was Todd's. There was nothing that could be done about it, but the argument increased the bad blood between the men. Ernestine wanted to go to her own home, she told Lillian. Mamma was hurrying back from Europe. The house at the lake was closed. Lillian remonstrated with Ernestine's determination to go back to the house out in Mayfair.

"But what will you do?" she asked, and her face grew red. "Will isn't even working."

"Yes, I am," said Will. "I started today. Mr. Poole is going to open an independent studio, and I am going to work for him. He's got hold of the copyrights to his old strip and we are going to syndicate it ourselves. It will bring us in a lot of money. I'm to get fifty dollars a week to begin with . . . and we'll be all right."

Lillian's dismay was increased, not diminished, by this news. The combination of Will and Mr. Poole was worse than nothing, it appeared to her.

"I don't know what mamma will say," she protested feebly, but neither Ernestine nor Will seemed to be moved by that.

It was a wonderful day when Ernestine went home. All the way home in the taxi Will held the baby in one arm and Ernestine in the other, and his face was shining with joy when at last they stood in their little kitchen, she weak and trembling in his arms. He was starved for her, but he kissed her gently, got the rocker and filled it with cushions and placed it by the open kitchen door. She sat there and watched him prepare supper.

"Will," she said, when they had eaten, and he had closed the door against the fall dusk, "you're like you used to be. You're like you were that day we met upon the street, when I first fell in love with you. Tell me, what is it?"

"The new job, I guess. I'm crazy about it, Ernestine. In the first place, to be working again is good—and, to be working for John Poole.—And then, Ernestine, I think we're going to do it.—I believe we'll make a success—a big one."

His enthusiasm was boundless. While he washed the dishes he talked to her, and then they put the children to bed, and he drew Ernestine onto his knees.

"Tell me, Ernestine—it was an ungodly business—but you aren't sorry, are you? Now that you're both home again—you're glad we've got her—aren't you?"

They sat looking at the baby. Will pressed his cheek against Ernestine's shoulder.

"Tell me," he implored her.

Ernestine understood his need for assurance. He was still suffering from the humiliation Lillian and Loring had heaped on him.

"They said—I shouldn't have allowed—allowed," he exclaimed sharply at the word. "I never thought about it."

"We're married, aren't we?" asked Ernestine, and as his bright look questioned her she shook her head a little.

"That's all," she said. "That's the answer. I'm your wife—I love you—of course I'm glad."

He kissed her passionately. It seemed so long since she had been in his arms like this—close, close.

"Oh, Ernestine," he said, "I don't deserve you. The future is uncertain. But if ever a wife deserved a good husband, you do. But, sweetheart, it's hard, it's been harder for you than for me; don't think I don't know it. But it's been worth the risk, hasn't it?"

"As long as we hold together," she whispered. "As long as we love."

And he poured his kisses upon her thin flushed face.

"I'll make up to you for everything—you'll never be sorry," he told her. And she lay against him, yielding, tremulous and in love, forgetting everything else for him as she had forgotten again and again.

CHAPTER X

Will Has a Vision

The firm of Poole and Todd found itself at the end of two years established beyond question. It owed its success to Will's terrific efforts. He had met and overcome one after another of their natural foes: Mr. Poole's idleness and intemperance. By a kind of fierce affection he had dominated and controlled the old man and kept him working. The profits were divided, after he had his fifty a week, and Poole his hundred. And out of his share of the profits, Will repaid his partner for the loan for Ernestine's hospital bill. He repaid him the exact half of the amount Poole had sunk into the business at the beginning.

And after two years he found himself face to face with the one enemy he could not conquer. Ernestine noticed that he grew thin and pale, that fall that the baby, Elaine, was two.

"What is it, Will?" she asked him. "I thought everything was fine now."

"It's Poole," said Will. "He's not drawing—he's boozing, but, of course, that's not new. Only—he's lost interest."

"What do you mean, Will?"

He seemed reluctant to put his thought into crude words.

"He's failing—his health. His eyes are bad."

"You mean—he's old?"

"Yes," said Will. "That's what I mean. He can't help it—poor devil—he struggles against it—but it's showing on him."

"But, Will, what are you doing?"

"Why, I'm managing—but that's all. When I can get him to help, we work together. We've got the strip all planned out for another year, the general sequence of things. But I don't feel that I can do Poole's stuff. My own ideas would be different. I can do the drawings well enough—nobody would notice, probably—but—"

"You don't want to go on—without him?"

"The stuff is his, Ernestine. I don't want to—there's something fundamentally wrong—even when I'm his partner, and all. For a while, as a makeshift, I can go ahead, and take care of the mechanics of it, and do the conversation—but actually, we haven't any business at all. We only have him—and when he's gone—"

Will sighed, and then squared his shoulders.

"Well—here's hoping," he said, and grinned at her. "I guess the old boat will sail another season. You see—it's hard for me to crowd him, Ernestine. He is old, and his eyes are about gone, and he hangs on me—it's like making a sick old horse pull in the harness—for us. Of course, it's for him, too, but it is really for us. We are the ones that will enjoy the money—not him. I find myself soft with him."

"I know." She understood this exactly, and her young face was troubled.

She was blooming again with beauty and vitality. She had been a lovely bud but now she was in flower—in her middle twenties—young with beauty and grace, but with poise now, too, and a strong sense of accomplishment. She had background now of a new kind—not the background of parents and school and a fine home, but the background of effort and self-control.

"I'll take Peter," she said. "You can look after Elaine."

She was going to Lillian's, to see mamma who was home from New York for another visit.

Will watched the family away, Elaine perched on his arm. Elaine was happy with her father, and they made a game of supper. Now, at two, she was beginning to be a bonny baby. They had had a long struggle with her. But at last her heart was beginning to beat a rhythmic tune—a healthy organ instead of an undeveloped heart in an undeveloped body. It almost seemed that they could breathe again.

After the little girl was sleeping Will sat beside her, smoking and watching her—dreaming those things a father dreams for his little daughter. The daylight was going, and the last of the light seemed to gather in an iridescence about the baby's face. Suddenly Will was shot through with an emotion more powerful than anything he had ever felt. For just an instant the baby face seemed the only thing in the world—the lashes down in a smudge against her cheek—he saw not flesh, but color—not bony structure, but pure line—idea—

He stared at her, and saw not the child but her picture. In that moment he sensed the true identity of her being, as one hears in astonishment clear tone and harmony where there is no sound. He was profoundly disturbed. Why, he could paint her—this was new—this feeling; he had not felt like this before, not even when he daubed so constantly in colors as a child. He had never felt this; he could paint her; he knew that he could.

* * * * * * *

During the whole month of January Mr Poole did not draw a line. He came to the office and sat there, but Will could not get him to work, and found himself incapable of much arguing.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

No People of History Unfamiliar With Rings

Rings were not always used to decorate the fingers, and in suitable forms at different times, they were worn as anklets, armlets and necklaces; on the toes and fingers; in the ears and nose, writes Frank H. Vizetelly, editor of the New Standard dictionary. To this day, the nose-ring, the ear-ring, and the toe-ring are worn in Far Eastern lands. Porcelain finger-rings were worn by the poorer class of Egyptians. Such as have been preserved in the British museum, London, are of extreme beauty. Some are of blue porcelain with a band of not more than one-eighth of an inch in thickness, yet small as they are they bear two impressions.

From Egypt and the East rings were introduced to Greece, where they were worn by all free men as insignia of office or for ornament. From the Greeks the Romans adopted the custom, but by them rings were worn more as luxuries, and became very common. To so great an excess did the Romans carry this practice that they had summer rings and winter rings, the former being heavier and thicker than the latter. Roman gems were sought and highly valued for mystic virtues attributed to them.

Put the Safe First

A man called on his stock broker and found him grumbling about lack of business and recent financial complications in the city.

He was about to leave his office for the day. As they were going out, the caller noticed that the door of the safe—a large, majestic piece of furniture—was open.

"Surely," said he, "you lock your safe for the night, don't you?"

"As a rule, yes," replied the broker, "but as things are at present, I would much rather that any one should take the contents than break the safe!"—St. John Telegraph Journal.

Music Helps Efficiency

As far back as 1886 the head of a southern factory, where cigarettes were rolled by hand, placed good singers in his workrooms to increase efficiency and contentment in the plant. There are today several hundred American industrial organizations that encourage musical activities among their employees. A survey conducted by the National Association for the Advancement of Music reports that 32 companies allow the musical programs to be conducted on company time, while 132 allow them to be conducted half on company time. Experiments prove that under the influence of music more work is done and fewer mistakes are made.

Meaning in Sentence

The term "a year and a day" in a prison sentence is designated so as to insure the lapse of a full year; a person serving such sentence is bound to serve at least a complete year.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

THE RIVER

David got up after a moment or two. He felt quite rested now and he thought he would like to go on walking some more.

He walked straight across North Dakota, passing many little Map people who were talking of their wheat crops and of the wheat crops in South Dakota just below them.

But David did not stop until he came to a river in Minnesota which looked for all the world rather like a handsome clown with a shape somewhat resembling that of a snake.

"My name is Mississippi," the river told David, "and this is where I started wandering. I'd never be satisfied sitting in one place. I've always been fond of wandering along, finding one place nice enough but looking on to see if the next might not be still nicer!

"I like to travel, to see fields and farms and deltas. I like to think sometimes of settling down and then packing up and going on.

"Sometimes when you find a member of the family looking muddy it's because we've thought of settling down. The part of me which you will find looking muddy is my quiet, home-loving nature coming out.

"But a river always gets into a rut unless it wanders on until it sees something big and glorious such as an ocean or a bay at the end of a trip.

"If you will wander along with me you will notice that my whole name is Missouri-Mississippi."

As David wandered along with the River he noticed that there was a look about Missouri-Mississippi as though he had slept out in the woods all night and hadn't bothered either to take off his clothes or to brush them off in the morning.

"That is all Missouri's fault. I am called, of course, Mississippi. That's the name all my friends know me by—and it was given to me in the first place because I am the father of waters.

"I call my children Tributaries instead of boys and girls. It's a more appropriate name for little rivers. I've a fine family.

"There is Ohio—Ohio is such a dear! And Arkansas is one of my favorite Tributary children.

"But you see Missouri is really a part of me and so that is why we're called by the one name, and why we're spoken of as one river.

"Years ago Red Men named Missouri and his name means big muddy river. That is why the part of me which looks so untidy is the Missouri part of me.

"For I am rather too indulgent a father if anything. I'm rather more restful, too.

"Missouri lets trees fall in where the water breaks up the banks—just a bit untidy and shiftless is Missouri, but it is too late anyway to change his ways.

"But here I am telling you to call us one river and I'm speaking as though we were two."

Then David noticed that the voice of Mississippi and the voice of Missouri mingled together and became a little confused.

Then he heard one voice again.

"I'm Missouri-Mississippi, and if you ever come to visit me you'd better hire a boat or open accounts in the savings banks."

"The savings banks," repeated David in surprise.

"Certainly, the savings banks of the river," Missouri-Mississippi went on. "The banks of the river save the people from falling into the river so they're the savings banks, silly.

"Once in awhile I overflow these banks, but then nothing in life, you know, is absolutely certain."

Then Missouri-Mississippi began to sing in a rather slow voice:

I'm the longest river in the world;
I live in the U. S. A.,
I come from the North and travel South
And see much along the way.
I see prairies, plains and cotton fields,
And help them all I can;
But I'll admit I'm helped in my work
By the creature we call man.

David found he had wandered quite a distance with Missouri-Mississippi but now he went back to the place where first he had begun to talk to Mississippi.

"I don't want to lose my way," David told himself, "and I don't think I'd better go on adventures with Missouri-Mississippi if he is the longest river in the world."

SAN MATEO COUNTY ROSES WIN RIBBON AT STATE FAIR

After capturing three first prizes for flower displays at the California state fair San Mateo county added a fourth when a rose exhibit from the McClellan nursery won the blue ribbon.

The blooms came from the San Mateo and Burlingame nurseries of the McClellan Company, among the largest in the West devoted to the growing of roses.

San Mateo county also was awarded a gold cup, one of ten prizes to counties featuring one product as a specialty. Santa Cruz, San Luis Obispo, Sonoma, Lake, Placer, Colusa, Solano, Humboldt, and Plumas counties also won this award.

Since the opening of the fair last Saturday, San Mateo county has won first prize on gladiolas, chrysanthemums, and carnations, in addition to the two awards announced.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1930 NUMBER 6

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

LET'S TALK OVER PLANS FOR YOUR HOME

Our business is to know what's what in building homes. We know lumber, what you can do with it and what's good lumber, with the result that any advice we give you is good advice. Come in and consult us—there is no obligation—and we are sure you can save money and worry by such a consultation.

The Brute

"Hello," called a feminine voice over the telephone, "is this the Humane Society?'

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, there's a book agent sitting in a tree, teasing my dog."

Plug Him For This

Harry: "And what would you do, Bill, if a horse fell in your bath-tub?"

Bill: "I'd pull the plug out."

Tammas: "Mon, these lower taxi fares will make a serious difference to us. We will not be able to save sae much by walkin'."

There's a reason why Aberdeen satisfies—it's different.

Look Under the Counter

Customer (after the clerk had pulled down all but one of the blankets on shelves): "I don't really want to buy a blanket today; I was only looking for a friend."

Clerk (sweetly): "Well, madam, if you think your friend is hiding in this one, I'll gladly take it down for you."

Hubby: "I miss the old cuspidore since it's gone."

Wifey: "You missed it before—that's why it's gone."

Not Contagious

"I see by the papers that policemen are going to be vaccinated."

"What for? They never catch anything."

Kindling and Block Wood.

"Is your husband a good provider, Diannah?"

"Yessum he's a good proviadah all right but I'se always skeered dat niggah's gwine ter git caught at it."
